INTRODUCTION

The resort tourism sector in Vietnam is experiencing strong growth, especially in the post-COVID-19 era, as the demand for high-quality vacation experiences continues to rise. According to the Tourism Information Technology Center (TITC), Vietnam welcomed 12.6 million international visitors in 2023—nearly 3.5 times higher than in 2022 and 57% above the initial target of 8 million. This surge has fueled a recovery and investment boom in resort development across the country. However, launching a resort project requires not only significant capital but also strict compliance with a complex web of legal regulations, ranging from licensing conditions and administrative procedures to standards in construction, environmental protection, and fire safety. This article provides a comprehensive overview of the legal framework governing resort investment and operations, aiming to help investors and businesses better understand the legal process, avoid unnecessary risks, and effectively leverage current investment incentive policies.
